What makes a person a human and not a human form is the inner peace, morality, personal experiences and the surroundings in which he is brought up. All these moulds his or her personality. Researches show that the age period of three to eight years plays a crucial role in our lives when we learn about our surroundings. Thus, every man in this world acquires the personality traits that are unique to him. Well, I am no different from the others, so I have my own personality traits. They are;

- Generosity – The quality of being kind and generous has always played a better part of myself. Helping out the less fortunate souls in my locality has been a part of my routine of every Sunday. It is the time of the week when I extend my helping hands with my local NGO services in sharing warmth among the downtrodden peoples and ill-treated animals.
- Loving – Love and Loyalty go hand in hand. Loving and caring for my society and friends helps me grow up into a better person.
- Devotion – I have a dream to be a software engineer in fields of Artificial Intelligence and Machine Learning. This is what gives me a purpose in life for the time being following which I have intention to serve my nation.

Talking about my strengths and weakness, I do boast of my mental strength – a never to give up attitude and to work hard till I live up to my dreams. However, I do feel my emotions play a key role in my life although they sometimes push me to depressed state and thereby feeling alienated.

“Imagination is everything. It is the preview of life’s coming attractions.” – a quote from Albert Einstein that never proves to be wrong in life. Well, I do like to imagine and this gives me the boost to search up answers of mysteries and explore the unknown, hypothetical situations.

The quest of acquiring knowledge and to learn from the past mistakes is the main moto of my life. It’s true that I have read countable novels, yet most of my days are spent surfing through e-pages of sports, journals, recent discoveries and technological advancement. I am not biased to learn about new religions either. So, every time there are ritual days and eventful days, I become super pumped up and excited.

“The effort will be to stand by the friends in his or her down period to follow the adage -A friend in need is a friend indeed - They deserve it, after all, and they are the ones that are going to spread happiness and warmth with you.”- a quote that I trust and follow from the bottom my heart. Well, I am putting my contact details just in case its needed; email: arghyabarik10@gmail.com, mobile: 8617751627. I will be happy to meet new people in my life for everybody has stories to tell.

In my school days, I used to take part in a good number of games and sports – from football to cricket and swimming to body building and karate. This attitude of team spirit and good sportsmanship has brought me awards. I have shared the junior cricket championship award, 2017 with my team 11Xc. I had also been awarded silver for coming second in interschool swimming competition, 2016. In the annual winter sports event of 2018, I was the runner-up of 100-meter race. Apart from these I have earned numerous certificates of participation in different events organised by my school.

Even all these credits seem less compared to the vastness of life. Everyday is a new opportunity sent to us by the divine god and it's up to one how well he or she utilises it. Life is a never-ending journey where people are known by their deeds and not by the years. I do take these seriously. I make mistakes everyday but that doesn't turn me down in catching the glimpse of unknown, spread love and happiness. These are all that renders me to prove my identity in this world.
